

Title

Man Down

Project Format

1 x 120-minute feature documentary

Genre

Documentary / Special Interest

Tagline

He served the country. Time to serve him.

Short Description

In 2016, documentary filmmaker Rachel Kaden made This is Me, a short film about former Royal Green Jacket Kevin Williams, the youngest rifleman to serve in Iraq. In March 2018, he took his own life as a result of his battle with Post Traumatic Stress.

Man Down is an intimate look at the of mind of a fallen soldier, supported by stories from the comrades he served with. It offers deep insight into being on the front line and highlights the complexities our brave heroes face when attempting to merge back into civilian life.

Audience

PRIMARY – Mature Adults, male and female (30-45)

SECONDARY – Young Adults, male and female (18-29)

Comparative Shows

Man on Wire, Jim: The James Foley Story, Restrepo

The Creator

RACHEL KADEN

RACHEL KADEN is an award-winning director with an innate love of storytelling. Her early years as an actress educated her in the art of performance, and a deep passion for British cinema led her to study film at the Sir John Cass School of Arts.

Her technical ability as a filmmaker is outstanding, and she is drawn to portraying human emotions in new and interesting ways. She's a personable director who connects well with both cast and crew, and her communication skills are second to none.

Current projects include the sci-fi anthology series Ackerman 85: Nascimento, the military documentary Man Down, and the original comedy Reasons to be Religious.

Action and drama are her favourite genres, but she also has a strong interest in documentaries and a natural instinct for comedy.

Rachel is based in London but is also happy to travel inside and outside the UK for work. For all enquiries about Rachel, including her current documentary Man Down, please contact her agent Jody Medland in the first instance.
